Dear Duane,

I am enclosing a copy of the excerpts from the history of Prince Ann Co. Va. which tells about the Caraway House. It is located on Witch Duck Road which is the main road through town. There is a sign out front by the road so it is very easy to find. The sign says "Caraway House".

There obviously are some errors in the article. on page 139 in the second paragraph it says the house was built in 1774. On the last line of the page it infers the house was built in 1734 and on page 167 the date is given as 1713. The 1713 date is the only one that could be right and still have been built by John<sup>3</sup>. Maybe you can solve this.

Good luck in your efforts.

Sincerely,

Jack Caraway

fine house near the present Oceana Boulevard. A long line of Cornicks had been living on this land since William Cornick received a grant of 1,736 acres in 1671. In the grant the land was named "Salisbury Plains," and the name remained over the years. The Cornick family became prominent in the life of the county, and especially in the Church, one of Joel's sons giving part of this land near the house for the Third Eastern Shore Chapel.

The house, with its fine interior woodwork, survived until 1951 as did the Chapel where services were held regularly, with Cornick men serving as lay readers in the absence of a visiting minister.

All of the other houses noted above have survived and are occupied today, but, in 1951, the United States Naval Air Station at Oceana needed to extend their runways for the jet planes, and unfortunately Salisbury Plains and the Chapel were in the way. This announcement caused much consternation, but the Navy paid for the removal of the Chapel and graveyard to its present location on Laskin Road. Descendants were found of all those who had been buried there so long ago, except for one. Since he could not be moved, a bronze plaque was set in the concrete runway with his name and dates. May he rest in peace as the jets roar overhead.

All of these had been well built in "the best of times"—The Golden Age—but three others were built a little later. Thurmer Hoggard built the beautiful "Poplar Hall" about 1760, as did William Woodhouse, and Lemuel Cornick built the imposing "Broad Bay Manor" in 1770.

A few frame houses built before the Revolution have miraculously survived. They are the Carraway House, (1713) now an antique shop, The Charles Henley house, 1771, and the Anthony Fentress House, 1765. Another frame house, which is on Kempsville Road, we believe to be the Nathaniel Nicholas house, built as early as 1671, but it has been so renovated that we cannot be sure of its date or the builder.

If it seemed to be "business as usual" in this county, the leaders of the upper class began to worry. Many felt, hopefully, that the differences between the colonies and the Mother Country should and would be resolved, and this feeling was reinforced by the clergy of the Church of England who were almost solidly behind England. If it came to open rebellion, it was inconceivable that England, the greatest seapower in the world, would not suppress it. And, yet, they felt that England was not being fair to her colonies. The status quo, with all its shortcomings, was still preferable to the possibility of danger to themselves, their way of life, and, above all, their land.

As they pondered, the first Continental Congress was held in original shutters on the windows, which contain many panes of the old hand-blown glass. While the bricks of the chimney are laid in the Virginia, or American pattern, some are decorated as in the 17th century, and beneath the large roof overhang on the front is decorative molding. Small as it is, it was built with care and taste. It was continually occupied by descendants of the first Carraway until 1975.

The only early Carraway will extant is Ann Carraway's, dated 1689, and it shows extremely few possessions. (Lower Norfolk County Order Book D.)

"daughter Mary Lovett—an iron kettle daughter Elizabeth Nichols—bell mettle mortar & pestle son Bartholomy Williamson—one shilling son John Carraway—one shilling

Signed: Anne Carraway
her mark."

John Carraway had obviously died first and distributed his property in his will, so this is all that poor Anne had to leave.

The story of John Carraway and his descendants is, we like to think, the story of America through the centuries: a success story of a man who started with nothing but strong character and ambition, and who learned and prospered through hard work and intelligence. His descendants were as upright and hardworking as he. A visit to this charming house is an inspiration.

The other houses of this middle, or small farmer class are privately owned and not open to the general public. Many of them, however, can be spotted by sharp eyes from county roads, and we hope that they will be preserved. For more about the houses in this county, see Old Houses in Princess Anne Virginia, by Sadie and V. Hope Kellam.

No houses remain of the lower class, as they were poorly built and soon destroyed. Also, cheap land had become unavailable for newly freed men as the population increased. Some worked as laborers or overseers for others, thereby being given a place to live, but others left to seek their fortunes elsewhere, especially in the frontier, which had been opened up by Governor Spotswood. Land was available there for little or nothing, as it was in eastern North Carolina, which was still sparsely settled at this time.

But it is unlikely that many people left Princess Anne County. The population figure of 1690 for tithables (no women or children) for all of Lower Norfolk County was 1,097 (Back of Book 5, 18 Nov. Court). In 1783, the population count of all inhabitants of Princess

Anne County included wor

The other house owned by the Princess Anne County Historical Society is Pembroke Manor, built in 1764, but we will tell of that one in a later chapter, as well as others of the upper class.

It is amazing that so many frame houses built by the middle class in the 18th century—nine in all—remain virtually untouched by the ravages of time or renovated beyond recognition. One of the most interesting is a sweet little house near the center of Kempsville, on traffic-laden Witch Duck Road. It was built, we believe, in 1774 by John Carraway, the grandson of the first John Carraway who had come here in 1644. It is now an antique shop, beautifully restored and furnished by the present owners and open to the public every day except Wednesday. It is a saltbox with a sloping roof to the back, unusual in this area, and is well-proportioned, with the one huge exterior chimney on the north side and the entrance door on the east corner to balance.

The first John Carraway came to Lower Norfolk County as an indentured servant to Colonel John Sidney (Nugent's, vol. I. p. 155). He could neither read nor write, as when he witnessed William Moseley's will in 1655, he signed with his mark, "IC." He had been a juror for a Grand Jury case in 1654 and, again, in 1663 and 1664 in a long drawn out suit against the Quakers. He was a witness in the 1664 case, having seen the accused at a Quaker meeting. He had also been one of the appraisers of the estate of Colonel Francis Emperor in 1662. Jurors and appraisers were carefully chosen for their reliability and knowledge.

He owned land in 1663, for in that year, a grant was recorded for John Porter in Lynnhaven Parish, "E. by N. to John Carraway's land—on the south side of the Eastern Branch of the Elizabeth River." His own grant for 100 acres was finally recorded in 1695, "in Princess Anne County, south of the head of the E. Br. of the Elizabeth River . . . to Kemp's patent." In 1706, his son, now entitled "Mr. John Carraway, Sr.," was granted an additional 447 acres.

The Carraways had done well, buying other land around the county, until in 1773, John Carraway III bought for £ 20, "a tract of land on the Western Shore called 'Labour in Vain' containing 67 acres." (Antiquary—James.) This had been the land of William Johnson, deceased, and was sold to John Carraway by his widow and his two sisters, co-heirs, but, he built the house now standing in Kemps Landing. At first, it had only the hall and one room downstairs, with two rooms upstairs. Later, an additional room was added on the back, and still later, the outside kitchen was moved and attached to the house. But from the front, the house looks as it did in 1734 with the

INTERGRAPH

As you notice I had very little information on your ancestor William T. Did your data come from bible records? I would appreciate copies of your source documents if you have any. Why do you think Elbert was a son of William T?

The spelling of Caraway has changed back and forth down through the generations. We are all the same crowd no matter how its spelled.

Uncle W. O. Caraway you mentioned was my great uncle. He is the one who got me interested in genealogy. Uncle Oates, as we called him, has been dead for several years. I've been able to add a lot to the information he had on our family and wish I could share it with him. Uncle Oates found out before he died that he was not descended from Archibald. In fact through correspondence he was able to locate some Bible records which proved our line of descent through Robert rather than Archibald.

INTERGRAPH
The Arch Caraway who died in Kemper Co MS was probably a descendant of a brother of my ancestor
Robert Caraway. Robert's brother was ~~Archibald~~ Alexander. He went to Miss. and finally settled in Kemper Co. I went there looking for his descendants but found few left and they didn't know much.

I will be glad to continue to exchange information with you. I would love to know more about the descendants of William T.

Hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

Jack F. Caraway

In my file I have an Elbert Caraway who married Jane McCain. They had a daughter, Catherine b. July 29, 1856 in Union Co. N.C.

INTERGRAPH

April 2, 1986

Dear Duane,

I was very glad to get your letter with enclosures. It provided an extension of information I have on your branch of our family. I am enclosing prints of charts which show the descent of Archibald from the immigrant, John Caraway. Our line is common from John's back to John. You will notice I credit my source to the notes of Charles T. Brasfield found in the B'ham, Ala public library. Charles was also a descendant of Archibald Caraway when he died his wife turned all of his notes over to the library and they are available to researchers. His research is not the only one which shows the same information. I have obtained much of the same material from several other sources. Much of it can be traced back to the research of Dr. James E. Caraway, who is now deceased. He laid much of the ground work for work on the Caraway line.

By U. D. Boggan D. C.

I the testator of the above Will wish this codicil to be considered and taken as a part of my last Will and testament and there has been some accumulation since the writing of the above.

I give and bequeath unto my Grand Daughter Sarah Moore Caraway one hundred dollars to her and her heirs forever to be paid over to her with interest from the probate of my Will when she arrive to the age of eighteen years unless it should appear to my executors to greater advantage to her to pay it over sooner as witness my hand and seal September the 10th 1833.
